You may have heard about rocket games: pop you over your iPhone and get a real rocket at your disposal! But most of those rockets have one big flaw: the fuel has to be put in some sort of container beforehand. That is why we designed Space Rocket! Space Rocket is a new non-fire rocket game, without any fuel containers. Your mission is to propel your rocket as high as possible, without exploding it in full flight! Each successful takeoff will bring you pieces that you can use to improve your rocket, or even unlock new colors. You can play the game in two game modes: either as yourself or as one of the special characters. In the first game, you can experience the rocket in all its glory, either to find the best starting position, or to obtain as much of the glory as you can before your rocket burns down! In the other game mode, you can utilize some characters to speed up the rocket's climb. There are five characters: Ship, Rocket, Drone, Satellite and Spacehopper, each with their own characteristics and abilities. To unlock new characters, you will have to collect all the pieces and boosters that can be found on the ground during your rocket's flight. Space Rocket has no time limits or targets. You are here to have fun, not to get somewhere. The sun also doesn't shine on Space Rocket! It is always dark in Space Rocket! Space Rocket is FREE to play, but you can pay real money for some extra fun stuff! Thanks for playing. Have fun and spread the word! The Rocket gameplay is amazing with many tips and secrets to discover. If you think you're prepared to launch your rocket, you can use the "Start" button and launch it to see if you're prepared for takeoff. If you're not prepared for takeoff and the rocket explodes, you'll have to try again and remove all obstacles, place the rocket correctly, and don't forget to pray to the Spirit of Unity... Do you have what it takes to launch your rocket? If you have any questions or suggestions, please don't hesitate to contact us in our Facebook page: Thank you for watching. published:29 May 2015 views:2416056 In Space, nobody can hear you rocket :) Subscribe to SennaFanClub ► We played this game called SpaceRocket in the final space school project. Or at least that was the original plan. 2 days before the feedback deadline, this game is still waiting. Please watch the video and enjoy the game, thanks for watching and for liking :) Inspired by the game of the same name from miniclip.com SpaceRocket Gameplay is available from: Made on request open source, serialization, and more Want to learn more about the project? Then check out the additional documentation here: The Goal of the SpaceRocket game is to keep your rocket fly in a way that there are no collisions with other objects. The meaning of this game is that you should keep the pressure of your rocket in a way that you control him, and that the player will feel like controlling it, and not the other way around. The player should also control the rocket by tilting the phone and make the rocket go up and down, and left and right. With the rocket flying in the same direction and close to the ceiling, the player should control the rocket so that it can maintain flight and the vehicle doesn't collide with any of the objects on the way. Another goal for SpaceRocket game is to be easy to play, but difficult to master.

What's new in Space Rocket:

Ship Space Rocket Ship (or, SRS) is an aerospace engineering program the proposed development of a human spaceflight capability to enable a multitude of commercial and government programs and operations. SRS was created by Joel Wallach and Ben Swinburne. Its scientific editor is Daniel O. Taylor, and its president is Ben Swinburne. The NASA Langley Research Center is the official coordinator. History At the 1988 Space Symposium, held in Houston on March 22-24, NASA Langley Research Center (the exact legal name of the current NASA Langley Research Center is NASA Langley Research Center located at Hampton Roads, Virginia and is sometimes called NASA Langley) formed Space Rapid Response Team (SRRT). The SRRT served as a seeding organization for the idea. As part of Langley's effort to create concept studies to support development of a human spaceflight capability in the next five years, the SRRT created a three-year study called Space Rapid Response. This study was for the purpose of low-cost, reusable, human space transportation. By 1992, it was decided that low-cost human spaceflight would be not only a Langley priority, but also a NASA and a U.S. government priority. This determination justified the formation of a National Space Rapid Reaction Fund for supporting the development. The National Space Rapid Reaction Fund was incorporated in April 1992 and became the Space Infrastructure Fund. In May 1992, a committee of NASA, the U.S. Department of Transportation (DOT), and the U.S. Air Force (USAF) was appointed by the U.S. Congress to create a National Space Transportation Study. In response to the mandate received from NASA's Congressional Delegation, the National Space Transportation Study Committee (NSTSC) was formed to oversee the development of a conceptual mission design for a low-cost human space transportation system. The system designated the Space Rapid Response (SRRT) as the conceptual design of such a system. This was the primary focus of the report. In 1996 the National Space Transportation Study released the findings of the study. These findings were the basis for the 1998 United States Federal Government's launch services policy, which was signed into law by President Bill Clinton on February 1, 1998 and came into effect on October 1, 1998. In 1998, an independent Space Rapid Response Technology Assessment Committee (SRRTTC), was created. By 1999, NASA and the US
